How to access Britannica Online Library Edition

Your members are able to access Britannica Online from in the library and from home

1. Within the library

Go to <http://www.library.eb.com.au> and you should be able to access the site. If you get the failed login page please contact Britannica immediately on (02) 9923 5600 or email libraries@britannica.com.au

2. Remotely from outside the library

Your library's link to Britannica Online from your library site should allow your patrons to enter their library card number to access the site.

Remote access allows

- patrons in remote areas to access from home
- patrons to access a resource 24/7 – even when the library is closed
- handicapped patrons to access from home
- patrons the chance to access a resource on a computer with no limitation – libraries may not have enough work stations available in the library for reference

How to promote Britannica Online in the library

- Staff awareness and training – ensure that all your staff know about your subscription to Britannica Online Library Edition and talk to the patrons on an ongoing basis
- Encourage students to use Britannica Online rather than the internet
- Promote the remote access to Britannica Online in your library newsletter
- Promote Britannica Online in handouts provided to new members
- Ensure that Britannica is featured prominently on the library website and is easy to access

Britannica has promotional materials for use by your library including “Getting Started with Britannica Online”, Britannica Online flyers and posters. Some examples are at the end of this training manual. Contact Britannica if you would like some more copies for your libraries.

Also when you are back at your library have a look at <http://edu.britannica.com.au/training> where you will find additional training materials that you can download and use.

Below is some of the feedback and comments that Britannica have received from Australian Public Libraries:

We see the database as giving our patrons access to a large amount of information in searchable form. Our librarians feel confident about the authority of the information and we have confidence in the authority of the source.

Each assignment required large amounts of information, with relevant diagrams. After searching our collections and not finding much relevant information, I decided to go straight to Encyclopaedia Britannica online. I am extremely pleased to say that I found all the information the teens needed, plus excellent diagrams for all five assignments!

I spent two full hours searching Britannica for the family, while they very patiently waded through each batch of information I gave them. Without access to Encyclopaedia Britannica online, I honestly don't know how I would have found the information, other than wading through mountains of Internet sites that I didn't have time for.

I am happy to report that the once stressed out, unhappy family that entered the library, left with arms full of relevant and current information and two very happy teens which made for very happy Mum and Dad!"

One patron happily announced that Britannica Online had 'saved the bacon' of her high school student daughter who, having left it all to the last minute as we all know students often do, used Britannica Online to gather almost the entire set of information she needed to write an Ancient History assignment. The assignment topic was on Akhenaten, Pharaoh of Ancient Egypt and his role in changes to the religious beliefs and practices of the time. Mother admitted to feeling guilty about this - relying entirely in the internet for researching a topic - and forcing daughter to read a couple of further hardcopy books for further evidentiary information. BOL meant that panic and tantrums were averted in that family household for that day at least.

Review questions

1. Name the different encyclopedias in Britannica Online Library Edition and who should use them.

2. What other resources appear in the search results?

3. Where are the journals and magazines in Britannica Online sourced from?

4. How can the library members access Britannica Online?

5. Name some of the different methods of searching Britannica Online.

6. If there is not enough information in the encyclopedia for the patron on a particular topic where in the site should you ensure that they look?

7. Why should they look at the weblinks in Britannica and not use a search engine such as Google or Yahoo?

8. Where would you find the news feeds in Britannica Online?

9. What should I do if I am asked for a username and password when accessing Britannica Online?

10. What should a member do if they have problems accessing Britannica Online?

Guided Tour Available From Home Pages Of All Levels

Welcome to Encyclopædia Britannica.

Encyclopædia Britannica is part of Encyclopædia Britannica Online Library Edition, which offers content at three different levels. Encyclopædia Britannica is designed for adults and high school/A-level students. To help you use the site more effectively we've created this short tour. It will guide you through the Encyclopædia Britannica, from the home page to a search results page and then an article page. The Home Page is an entryway to all the resources available on the site.

Search
Find information quickly and easily by searching Encyclopædia Britannica, magazines and journals, the Web's Best Sites, images and Britannica's collection of videos. Simply type in a word or phrase. You can also search Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary and Thesaurus to find definitions of unfamiliar words. First select Dictionary & Thesaurus under the search box, then type a word in the search box and click Go.

Historic and Current Events
Learn about significant people and events from the past with Biography of the Day and This Day in History. Read about today's news with headlines and links to leading news sources.

Britannica Highlights
Read noteworthy articles from Encyclopædia Britannica, chosen each week by Britannica editors.

Features
You can explore Britannica Spotlights, multimedia presentations on a variety of topics—from Shakespeare to Nobel prizewinners. Or read articles by some of Britannica's most famous contributors from past editions in Classics. You also have another opportunity to search Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary and Thesaurus.

Encyclopædia Britannica Articles

When you choose an Encyclopædia Britannica article you will see a page that looks similar to this one. Britannica's articles are noted for their interesting and informative content, and we've included some features that will make exploring that content even easier.

Find Your Way
Use the links below the header to return to Encyclopædia Britannica Home or get more help with the site.

Switch Levels
Many of the articles in Encyclopædia Britannica were written by experts in the field. If an article is signed by the author, you'll find his or her name at the bottom of the last section. Click on the name to see information about the author.

If you'd like to find encyclopedia articles and content at a lower reading level, use the buttons at the bottom of the page to switch to a different level. Choose Britannica Student to find content for middle/secondary school students or Britannica Junior to find content for primary school students. Or you can choose the site for all students and search all the encyclopedias in Encyclopædia Britannica Online Library Edition.

You can also quickly see search results from other levels by entering a word in the Search Again box then selecting an encyclopedia from the menu and clicking Go.

The text of the article appears in the center of the page. Media that accompany articles are arranged to the left of the text. To see a larger version of an image or play a media element, click on it.

Related content accompanies many of the articles. Use the buttons on the top of the left column to find maps & flags, tables and images. For example, click "Images" to see a list of pictures indexed to China.

Longer articles are divided into separate pages. You'll find a link to the next section at the top and bottom of the page. You can also go directly to different sections of the article by using the article's table of contents, which is also displayed on the left side of the page. Some tables of contents are very detailed and include subheadings as well as headings. Click the plus sign (+) next to a heading to view its subheadings. You can also display the entire table of contents by clicking the link at the top that reads "Expand the entire Table of Contents for this article."

If you'd like to print an article, you can switch to a printer-friendly format. You can share an article with a friend via email. Also, if you plan to refer to an article in a report or paper, we provide correctly formatted citations. Just click on the Print, E-mail and Cite links at the top of the article.

Many of the articles in Encyclopædia Britannica were written by experts in the field. If an article is signed by the author, you'll find his or her name at the bottom of the last section. Click on the name to see information about the author.

Magazines, Journals and Periodicals Included in Britannica Online School Edition
